28 ▾ Texas should call him home. Unless they want to appoint him ambassador to the US, he should be in the republic of Texas. Just like the other TX senator and the TX reps. OK, KS, and some others might join in when the form the new republic. Rumor is Trump was moved to TX as well. Maybe he'll be president of a new country that will follow the constitution.

18 ▾ You know, if Texas wants to secede (which it should have every right to), it should just cede all of its land and people except El Paso County to a new Free Territory of Texas which could then be spun off into the Free Republic of Texas (much like how the US territory of the Philippines became an independent nation). That way, with El Paso metro area carrying on as Texas (the state), no state need secede and we can therefore bypass the 1869 precdent of Texas v. White which ruled that secession is somehow unconstitutional.

Most other red states can follow suit by redrawing their borders and cedeing the bulk of their land and people that will then join the new nation.

If this country continues to cling onto the illusion that a single Constitution and founding means a single sovereign nation and one-size fit all solution for all 300+ million Americans, then it will only subject itself to all the horrors and unrest of the Christian Reformation. At best, it ends in a new Westphalian system of sovereign American nations defined by differing denominations of the American civic religion. At worst, it becomes a post-nuclear war Hunger Games-style dictatorship ruled by a single one of the would-be independent nations.

2 ▾ Of course they have every right to secede. SCOTUS just ruled that states don't have standing against each other. If one or more now wants to leave, who's to stop them?

8 ▾ Texas should secede. I say this as someone who lives there (eight years and joyfully counting) who might have a lot to lose if that happens, who was not born in this state but kind of desperately wants one of those signs that says "...but I got here as fast as I could!"

Enough already. At a certain point in a relationship it's time to say, "Yanno, this, just is going to work out."

Do I think this could happen? (sigh) At the moment, sadly, no, I don't. But I'd love love see that I was wrong about that.

4 I would be surprised if it happened in my lifetime (but I was surprised to see people on the right actually do something today), but if Texas ever did secede, there would be several states going along with them.

Honestly, California should secede. It is the most 'different' state from all the rest (with the possible exception of Louisiana and its weird French systems).

66 Nobody in the military will ever uphold their oath of enlistment. The domestic enemies are in Langley Virginia, Washington DC, and Silicon Valley.

Military are just the muscle behind the thugs. They protect and work for the thugs, not for the people of this nation so stop talking bullshit.

There should have been consequences for George W. Bush lying this nation into a war. He violated the Geneva Conventions that our nation forced the Nazis and Japanese to sign after WWII to ensure a fascist nation never again appears on the world stage.

Well, the United States has been full fascist for 20 years now. We have constant propaganda go to wars to enrich corporations, people are commodities, and there are no rights. Constitution LONG dead. So don't tell us what you're supposedly going to do. We know what you'll do -

1 Exactly it's those Langley dudes. ISA, integrated systems analyst, which manages the entire federal database, was sold to terralogic, an Indian h1b tech company. When Isa was transferred to terralogic, they decided to build their servers in vietnam. So all of our secrets and databases are all being held in vietnam. What the fuck is up with that?

The owner of terralogic started a shifty bus company that has the shorties reviews in India called yatragerie. If you look at their reviews, Theo buses always catch fire.

So tell, how did this second-rate scum businessman buy out Isa integrated systems analysts and read it terralogic. Unlike dominion, terralogic has a shell office we can all visit in San jose.

-3 To be fair, they won't fully have all 3 until after they actually appoint some new SCOTUS seats (which they might take some time to get around to, since SCOTUS won't oppose most of the agenda). They might not have Trump's back, but they'll need a few more activists before they can implement gun seizures and mandatory vaccinations. ACB and Kavanaugh would have enough spine for that, I think.

▼ In America, conservative whites best character trait is also their biggest weakness, and the left are masters of taking advantage of it. What I speak of is of course that trait of rugged American individualism. We are the least tribalistic to a fault, and that only works in a truly free country with a small government where checks and balances still matter, oh yeah, and elections are still real.

White folks are also the only demographic who will openly, and proudly fight tooth and nail for policies that bring about their own suicides while also fighting for other demos who openly and proudly take advantage of them many times even with violence. It's fascinating, and sad to watch. So goes western civilization. 😞

1 ▼ If you had paid proper attention starting from 2016 election, you would see that Pence didn't always agree with Trump. He was always an establishment Republican. The reason trump chose him was because Pence was an establishment Republican. He needed an establishment Republican support to get his agenda rolling in Congress. ... ..you don't need Lin Wood to see that Pence will immediately backstab Trump the second bitch McConnell turned.....and there was a reason Trump bought up Pence last few days in couple if tweets and during GA rally. Remember trump said he HOPES Pence will come through for us. If Trump was sure, he would have said Pence WILL come through for us, but instead he used HOPES. This was a dead giveaway that Pence will be backstabbing Trump....

You failed to see it, you don't need Lin Wood for this, this is called critical thinking and common sense... Lol And you are just stupid to trust a politician and people in power. Even founding fathers were wise to see and said not to trust people in power... And you failed.

I fear that we will sit around and wank it until we are fucking poor, disarmed, demoralized as fuck, and THEN we will be ready to fight (atleast the gen public DIPSHIT of a person will be ready then after it's too fucking late). It's bullshit bro. I am sick and fucking tired of the arrogance from these pissant politicians. These fuckers work for us. We deserve to be heard. People don't understand that in war, people die. A lot of people die. A lot of innocents die. Untold amounts of young soldiers die. We're freaking out because one woman was killed today. That amount of blood isn't even close to what it will take. I'm not dooming, it's just what history tells us.

Yes, this. All those posts over the past few months about people being ready for war and wanting to get it started, always struck me as ill-advised. There are so many innocent and helpless people caught in the fall out that I would never wish for it in my homeland, although it may become a necessity. Do people think food supply lines and society will just continue on as if nothing is happening? We are no longer self sufficient in our communities. At the very least the elderly, ill (dependent on medication), and young will suffer the most. Unless we can keep it localized, everyone will suffer in some capacity.

Fear has made them who they are. After being gaslighted from beyond I have no more fear to protect this room and they are stuck in here with us.

1 Yes. And the way they spoke during the electoral college felt like a "fuck you what are you going to do about it." If we fight I'm pretty certain they will bring foreign armies to our doorsteps.

1 I saw a Tweet earlier, of an offer by China to send 250,000 "peacekeepers to our cities, to help with "stabilizing the transition" to a Biden administration.

I thought it was but a farce, part of the junk flying around.

So...Pence and the Joint Chiefs of Staff are just going to allow a couple of Chinese divisions on our soil?

Hard to believe...but after everything that's happened today...I guess nothing should be taken off the table, however far-fetched.
